

Accommodation

Accommodation providers have advised us that accommodation in Dunedin in November is expected to be in high demand following the return of cruise ships and other scheduled tour groups, as well as numerous other conferences being held in Dunedin during the same week as the NZAA Conference, so getting early is recommended. Many of the hotels in Dunedin have said that their pricing systems are dynamic and fluctuate in accordance with demand and their competitors as well as time of booking (like airline ticket prices) so we have been unable to give actual rates, but discounts are available at all providers listed below.

For bookings to be eligible for the discounted rate, bookings must be made directly with the provider. It is recommended you ring the hotel/motel and let them know that the reservation is for attendance at the New Zealand Archaeological Association conference being hosted by the University of Otago. Bookings made directly through provider websites or third-party booking services are not eligible for a discounted rate.
