

Is it cake or is it archaeology?

Yes, it's that time again! Close the laptop, put down the trowel and dust off your aprons...we want to see your very best efforts at showcasing New Zealand archaeology in edible form. Doesn't need to be a cake (gingerbread enthusiasts I'm looking at you), if you can bake it and eat it then you're in with a chance!

Last year we had some great entries focussing on the art of excavation but don't forget archaeology can include artefacts and places...

The competition is open to all (don't need to be a NZAA member to participate) so let's have some fun!

Photos of your amazing creations are to be sent to archaeologyweek@nzarchaeology.org along with your contact details.

All photos must be submitted by the 28th of April. These will then be posted on social media and the photo with the most 'likes' by Friday May 10th will be the winner.

The winner will receive a $50 pressie card, a certificate they can proudly display on their fridge and of course bragging rights 😊
